GERMANS SEEK MEMBERSHIP IN NATIONS LEAGUE

Government May Use Opportunity to Restate Views on War-Guilt Question

FEDERAL PREMIERS DISCUSS PROPOSAL

Promise Made to Do Everything to Strengthen Reich's Position in Organization

By Special Cable BERLIN, Feb. 8-The Government held a Cabinet meeting this morning about submitting Germany's application for membership to the League of Nations, which may be dispatched today or tomorrow. While it will not contain any conditions or make reservations for Germany's entrance reservations for Germany's entrance to the League, but will be a "straightforward application," as one high Foreign Office official told the correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor last night, it is believed in political circles here that the Government will use the oppor tunity to restate its views on the war-guilt question, its interpretation of Article 16 of the League Covenant and other questions of interest to Germany in connection with its joining the League.

At Saturday's discussion between the prime ministers of the federal states, Dr. Hans Luther and Dr. Gustav Stresemann, regarding Germany's pending application, only the Premier of Mecklenburg opposed Germany's entrance, while the prime ministers of Bavaria and Thuringia expressed a wish that the Reich would have induced the Allies to increase the ameliorations in the Rhineland before joining the League.

Below will be found the second part of Stephane Lauzanne's story of the French debt negotiations in Washington. The story appeared originally in Les Œuvres Libres, and is being reprinted in the Monitor in three parts. Particular interest attaches to the story in view of the fact that Henry Berenger is about to resume the debt negotiations with the United States, negotiations which in the case of Joseph Cail-

His Judgment Stands

My own judgment and conviction upon this question remain what they were when I addressed our convention upon the subject in 1922. I have given much study to the question and have considered carefully the evidence presented by those who believe in prohibition and by those who are opposed to it and I have found no reason to change my views. found no reason to change my views. I do not hold that to drink wine or other intoxicant, in moderation, is in itself a sin. But I believe that the prohibition law, properly enforced, will make us a healthier, stronger and better people, and I believe that these laws can be and ought to be enforced and are being the properable observed in the control of the re and more generally observed in ountry as a whole

Recognizes Some Truths

I recognize the truth of much that is said as to the increase of drinking among certain groups and classes of people, the lowering of standards, the flask carrying and other disgusting and degrading practices which have been introuced among those who ought t know better and to have nobler ideals of life. I recognize the evil and corruption connected with bootlegging in which, let us remember, the respected members of society who patronize the bootlegger and so create him are just as reprehensible as the men whom they thus tempt and pay to violate the law.

We must remember, however, that the pictures of these violations of the law are drawn usually by those who wish to use them as an argument for the repeal or modification of the law. Other laws of our land are difficult of enforcement and are frequently violated, but we do not, therefore, suggest their modification or reneal. We must consider this or repeal. We must consider this law not in its effect upon certain groups or communities who willfully choose to defy and violate it, but in its effects upon the life of our country as a whole, and so considered there is, in my judgment, no room for serious doubt as to its beneficial

Respected by Most People

By a great part of our people we see this law respected and obeyed. We see its observance in the country We see its observance in the country as a whole increasing, and not decreasing. We see the lives and homes of our wage-earners and our plain people immeasurably benefited by it. We see in many places jails closed because they are no longer needed. We see in such a situation as the present coal strike the entire absence of disturbance and disorder as a result largely of the prohibition laws. There is not the slightest likelihood that the country will ever repeal the ohibition laws, and we all know parties could be prevailed upon even to consider a wet plank in its platform. Any political party which adopted such a plank would sign its own death warrant.

Against Modification

I do not believe that the Volstead Act should be modified at this time When the law is being so observed by all that we can be assured that its modification would not mean its practical nullification; when its modification is desired by the sin-cere friends as well as by the enetion of it may and probably will be

I see that some of our bishops and clergy say that this law cannot be enforced. Instead of saying that it cannot be enforced, let us do our part to arouse the spirit which will nart to arouse the spirit which will insure its enforcement and give our help more strongly to our brethren and the other authorities who are laboring far more earnestly than we to secure this.

Cites Main Facts

Cites Main Facts

Let me present briefly three or four of the main facts in regard to this question as I see them:

1. This law is not a wrong, or evil, or implous on such as we should be justified in refusing to obey. I quote the words of John G. Sargent, Attorney-General of the United States, in his recent address to the New York State Bar Association: "That a traffic which for generations has been recognized and discussed, and written about by economists, sociologists and jurists as an evil, may be marked for extinction by the law-making power and agencies of the country is not only settled law, settled beyond the stage of being longer open to question, but it has been settled, and reasoning," and our country had the full right to make that law.

Citizens Should Obey

Citizens Should Obey

The prohibition law being the law of our land, it is the duty of every good citizen to obey it. To quote the Attorney-General again, "In this country the will of the people, expressed at the ballot box, creates the duty of the citizen upon the subject voted upon." The Attorney-General no doubt recognizes, as I certainly do, that a law might be passed by a human tribunal so impious in its nature, so contrary to the law of God and of right that it would be our duty to defy and resist it to the death, but this is not such a law. If we are ever to resist the law in the name of personal liberty, I hope it will be in a higher cause than the right to buy and drink intoxicating liquors. The prohibition law being the law

Those who disapprove this law have the right to say so, and to work in lawful ways for its modifi-cation, or repeal, but no citizen of our land has the right to disobey this law of to encourage others to do so, and no one can do this with-out reflection upon himself and in-jury to the life of our country. As ident Coolidge has said: "It is the duty of a citizen not only to observe the law, but to let it be known that he is opposed to its violation." A democracy can endure only upon the foundation of observ-ance of this law.

Not Wholly a Law Problem 4. The law has its great importance, but we must not depend only upon the law to promote temperance among our people. It is quite true that "social legislation is never a substitute for social education." In this one point, and this only, I agree with the recent statement made in the name of the Church Temperance Society. We need and should have by all the churches a continuous campaign of information and education as to the evils, physintellectual, economic, moral and spiritual, which have cursed the world as the result of the use of in-toxicating drinks.

5. Last, I wish that we might lift this subject up from the level of mere law enforcement to the higher level of free, voluntary, willing sup-port of the law for the sake of the common good. In view of what our race has suf-fered through the evils of strong drink, in view of the agony which fathers, mothers and children have suffered from it, in view of the fact that its suppression means the re-duction of poverty, sorrow, disease and crime, may we not all of us be willing and glad to make such surrender of our personal liberties, or of our tastes, as the law calls for and to see prohibition fully and fairly

Good for Young of Nation

We know that it was good for the young men of our land during the war and we know that it is equally good for them now. We are all stirred with pride and admiration at the wonderful and heroic rescue of those in danger by Captain Fried and the officers and men of the President Roosevelt.

That is an example which is an honor to our country and gives all of us a fresh impulse for nobler liv-ing. What a magnificent thing it would be if for the aid of those who are endangered by strong drink we should all of us give our full support to the prohibition laws.

What better exhibition could there be of the idealism of America than be of the idealism of America than such willing surrender to our preferences and tastes for the good of all and for the help especially of our weaker brethren? Shall we not all give our help to it?

There is no nobler spirit than that which says with St. Paul, "If meat maketh my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh forevermore, that I make not my brother to stumble."

I wish that the clergy of our Church and of all churches all over our land would join in a crusade for church and of all churches all over our land would join in a crusade for such voluntary and noble action in support of the law and that the peo-ple of all churches and all good citi-zens would unite in such a move-ment. Can any one doubt that this would be for the moral and spiritual good of our country? good of our country?

Motion picture shows at Tremont Temple are to be discontinued by order of the executive committee of the Tremont Temple Baptist Church, which owns the building, it was announced by the Rev. Dr. Jasper C. Massee at yesterday's services. There has always been opposition on the part of a number of church members to the pictures. Tremont Ten.ple was founded by Timothy Gilbert in 1842. Credited with being a member of the Boston Underground Railway Committee for assisting slaves to freedom, he ap peared with several escaped slaves in his pew in the Charles Street Baptist Church one Sunday. This being objected to by some of the parish-ioners, Mr. Gilbert decided to start a church of his own. He purchased the old Tremont Theater, located where Tremont Temple now stands, and turned it into a church.

Estimates prepared by the Do-minion Pulpwood Commission, which were based on the best available data, show a total stand of the species ordinarily used for pulp making of 1,418,000,000 cords. Of this only 630,-000,000 cords are considered accessible. This amount would supply the present Canadian pulp-wood cut of 4,650,000 cords for 135 years, which rially alter the situation must be considered. This estimate includes 194,000,000 cords of poplar and Jack pine, very little of which is now used in Canadian mills, and it is not likely that more than one-half of this will be used for pulp. Some new sources of supply now considered inaccessible will undoubtedly be opened up during the next 50 years, but taking all these into consideration there is probably not more than 600,000,000 cords of usable pulpwood in sight, if we do not consider increment.

With a total depletion of 20,000,000 cords annually, Canada's present merchantable stand of 600,000,000 cords will be used up in 30 years, a

Unorganized Position

In connection with co-operative marketing, the report declares: "One large factor in the farmer's present plight is his generally unor-ganized position. In this respect he is not on the same standing with men in other industries and trades he is at a disadvantage in all that affects competitive interests. Where farmers have organized themselves into groups for business purposes it has often been found to be of great benefit. The individual farmer is usually too occupied raising his crops and tending to his animals, with all the labor and details of attention these require, to pay much attention to marketing his crops. He often has neither time, taste, nor training for it. When he unites with other farmers for the purpose of marketing his products, the association is in a position to secure the time and services of a person responsible to them who can locate the best places to market their products and to buy their supplies and ucts and to buy their supplies and means of support was in editing and making. whose training and experience fit selling a music book. The necessity for the production of more forest products is particularly emphasized in the chamber's report, which adds:

"The rapid depletion of the forest resources of the country and the many essential uses to which their products are put, make it practically certain that wood is one farm crop which will always command a good market. It is also certain that after the exhaustion of the remaining supplies of virgin timber, New England will have a decided advantage in meeting the competition of other regions because of the heavy freight charges involved in transporting so the wood crop does not have to be harvested each year, as do corn, hay, onions and apples, but can be stored are favorable for its utilization.

Woodlot an asset "In view of these facts, the woodlot is apt to prove an increasingly valuable asset, to the improvement of which more attention can profitably be paid. The foresighted farmer will not only leave his young stands to grow in size and quality and to take advantage of appreciating market prices; he will also endeavor to increase their growth by cultural measures and will set out new forests on unused parts of the farm.

"The work in the woodlot falls well into the labor program of the farm-er's year. Like the brief season for naking maple sugar, it does not conflict with the raising of crops or car-ing for stock. Winter, when snow covers the ground and facilitates the moving of sleds, is the best time for the farmer to cut and haul his logs, remove dead or drying trees, and 'weed trees' of the less valuable species and thin and trim his forest to regulate the amount of sunlight admitted and increase the growth of his crop, as planting of new trees can ordinarily be done in early spring or late fall, before the land is in suitable condition for planting other crops, or after they have been harvested. Thus the woodlot pro-vides profitable occupation for those seasons of the year when otherwise there would be little besides chores to occupy the time of the farmer and his hired man, thus doing its part to balance the farmer's work and to make it possible for him to provide steady, year-round employment to his hired man."

In referring to studies of farm profits in Massachusetts, the commit-tee advocates a diversity of crops: "The most significent conclusions derived from these studies indicate that under present conditions of the prices of labor, imported feeds, and sale value of products, and over a period of years, the farmer should not specialize too strongly. He should diversify his farm activities and sources of income to the extent of a third major item, and often he could profitably add a fourth as-a minor project.

He does not bring a preconceived palette or brushstroke or imaginative idea to his subject, but sets himself in a receiving mood before it. Whether it is a scene of Paris or Umbria, he interprets it in the full opulence of color or with the so-briety of more neutral tones, as the occasion demands. His brush is smooth, certain, varied in its stroke, warm, cold, broad, detailed. In other words, it is an adaptive brush. Mr. Wade composes with a natural talent for the rhythm of curves as in some of the silhouetted sketches of mountains; or for the illusory inter-penetration of colors in the twilight scenes. His pictures display a ver-satilty, a feeling for the emotional quality of color, a taste for the contrasts between the brusquer and more gentle moments in nature. Perhaps he allows his enthusiasm too free reign sometimes. In the moment when he exults in a certain brilliant color or a particularly appealing surface a restraining hand may be necessary in order to subortion they are less emotional. LEEDS WITH ITS FACTORIES STYLED A HIVE OF INDUSTRY

Unemployment, Even With Increase of Population, Reaching Normal-World Turns to Britain for Quality

By FRANK PLACHY JR. In the second of his series of arti-cles on British industry, Frank Plachy Jr. draws a picture of the Nation's commercial prospects in 1926, as viewed through American eyes. To insure giving an unpreju diced view, Mr. Plachy is visiting the principal manufacturing and exporting centers in the United Kingdom, sending this article from Leeds.

LEEDS, Jan. 28-Viewed from the standpoint of general trade and industry, Leeds is the most remarkcomposite city in the British Isles. It has almost perfect facilities for the economical production of manufactured goods, and as a result industries covering a very wide range have located in the district. With abundant labor of a very intelligent type, pure water, cheap coal and access to a wide range of raw material, its manufacturing Industries have been solidly built up. In spite of the fact that it is in almost the geographical center of England and is exactly half way between London and Edinburgh, its transport facilities are so efficient as to enable it to compete on equal terms with cities having direct access to ocean shipping.

There is no outstanding industry in Leeds. Its workshops and factories cover an enormous range, a few of which are electrical machin-ery, woolen goods, wholesale clothing trade, women's clothing, industrial locomotives, railroad locomotives, machine tools, agricultural machinery, motorcars and trucks, motorcar parts, weighing machines hardware, printing and printing machinery, printing inks, textile machinery, aircraft, leather, and shoes, wall paper, glass bottles and a long list of lesser industries, which, however, make a large aggregate total.

Employment Normal

The result of such a variegated lot of activities is that Leeds is not subject to those periodical swings of unemployment which must be expected in places largely dependent on one industry. When things are quiet in one factory in Leeds, the workers are generally able to secure employment in some other line, the result being that unemployment is now practically normal and may be expected to decrease steadily. The fact that this range of employment applies to both men and women is also a pointed advantage.

A fact generally overlooked may well be interjected here concerning the subject of British unemployment It is true that this question has been one of appalling seriousness at some periods of the post-war years, algetting to what may be called the normal figure. The truth is that in spite of world-wide industrial depression there are 400,000 more people employed in Britain today than

The reason for the large unemployment figures which have been published at times is that the British are a prolific people with a constantly increasing population. Prior to the war the annual increase, except in so far as home employment ca pacity developed, emigrated to the dominions, the United States and elsewhere throughout the world. Since 1914 this annual emigration has almost entirely ceased, and it is the surplus of workers thus created who have constituted the unemployment problem.

A Hive of Industry One has only to spend a short time in Leeds to realize what a hive of industry it is. I was there at the end of January, when the darkness of an English winter evening still descended at about half past four o'clock. One could then stand on the hills which rise gently from the River Ayr, which wends its tortuou way through the valley, and watch the lights of the workshops, factories and foundries as they sparkled like the sky on a clear, moonless night. Every window seemed il-luminated and factory owners do not spend money lighting their plants unless the lights are needed by the workers, while the recurring blazes from the blast furnaces reminded one of Pittsburgh.

This was especially true in the factories making motorcar parts. These parts are made in Leeds for car manufacturers in all parts of the country, and some of the plants are working two full shifts. The textile machinery manufacturers are also very busy, and here is an indus-try, incidentally, which has a roseate future ahead of it. The entire world is short of textile machinery. In Russia, for instance, it is estimated that not a new spindle has been erected since 1914, nor has any adequate upkeep been given to the plant which was in existence when the war broke out. British engineering skill seems to have a special aptitude for this class of engineering work and the future for it looks pleasant in-

A World Outlook

A visitor to the industrial section of Leeds begins to understand what a truly world outlook a British manuacturer must have. In America, with export trade amounting to about 5 of the entire export market would be export or starve. And it is in matching wits with the best minds of every other country that Britain, which is out a speck on the map of the world, has been for a century and promises be remain the workshop from which is supplied the wants of the more backward peoples of the world. It is apparent that British industry in the future intends to depend upon quality rather than quantity. World conditions have changed to such an extent other countries are now able to pete with the British in mere rasompete with the British in mere ra-pidity of outturn, but in the human element, in painstaking skill and pride of good artisanship, the British still are supreme. They have lost a multitude of orders during the past five years because of their refusal to cheapen their products.

Buyers Turn to Britain the world returns to better goods steadily grows, it is natural that the buyers of the world turn to Britain for articles in which quality is the prime consideration and price ndary matter. That is why British textiles of the better sort are able to leap even the American tariff bar-rier, while other countries desiring high-class British goods like the bet-ter grades of textile machinery are careful not to put too serious obstacles in the way of their purchase. It is clear, therefore, that British prosperity, now clearly discernible through the dissolving mists of the to stand on than merely the generally goods from all countries. Consumable goods can be turned out in many places, but the goods which the quality markets demand have a reputation which causes buyers to turn instinctively to Britain. There is a deep feeling of calm confidence throughout British industry. A boom is not expected and is not wanted. What is or the principal and interest?" already beginning and what is expected to increase steadily is a long period of improving trade based on sound foundations.

between her commercial credits and her political credits. When you had need of her to support your credit and your exchange, who sent you to the Bank of England? The latter lent £55,000,000 to the Bank of France; but it demanded a gold deposit and interest at 6 per cent. The gold is still in England and the interest is paid regularly by the Bank of France without any protest in your country. We Americans were less adroit or more generous. We lent up to $682,000,000, not intended directly for war supplies, but which had the purpose of helping you meet commercial engagements and support the franc on the exchange market. And we did not send you to our banks, we did not ask gold in guarantee, and we did not insist on a 6 per cent interest. For the principal, a pledge was requested from the French Government. For the interest, they contented themselves with proposing a figure, with the assurance that they took into most complete account its present terpreter, we had both insisted with difficulties. Still better: two tables of all our strength on obtaining this annuffles had been appended to the clause, which had become little by proposition through, Mr. Mellon's little the keystone of the arch of houghtfulness—a table of annuities for the principal, a table of annuities for the interest. But, while the table of annuities for the principal had been carefully printed, photographed, and several dozen copies issued, the table of annuities for the interest had been simply typed on a single sheet of paper. It would be impossible to say more clearly:

THE continued leadership of The Sun in advertising among New York evening newspapers was more pronounced in January than ever before.

In January The Sun led the second New York evening newspaper by 229,498 lines. The Sun's lead during this month was nearly a hundred thousand lines greater than in any preceding month.

The Sun's gain in total advertising in January of this year compared with January of last year was 206,894 lines. This was 72,204 lines more than the combined gains of all the other New York evening newspapers.

National Advertisers have found through experience that The Sun is an extremely effective medium through which to sell their products in New York and for this reason, month after month, and year after year, they use more space in The Sun than in any other New York evening newspaper.

Advertisers prefer The Sun to all other New York evening newspapers because of its demonstrated superior selling power—a selling power that is due to an unusually responsive circulation.

The Sun is read by people who have the means as well as the desire to buy what they need and want—people who have confidence in The Sun as a newspaper and who respond readily to the advertisements which it publishes.

A very rigid censorship on all advertising is maintained

The Paintings of Alexander Goltz

Special Correspondence

PECIAL interest attaches at the moment to the paintings of Alexander Demetrius Goltz, since this Austrian professor has just been elected president of the Vienna Fine Arts Society.

A work of exceptional merit from the brush of Professor Goltz, "Christus und die Frauen," hangs in the Austrian National Art Museum; another, the "Bauern Madonna," is on the walls of the Vienna Municipal Art Gallery; in the Vienna palace of the former Emperors of Austria is an historical painting of a scene in Ghent; and, in the Henning Gallery, in Berlin, is his painting of the nativity. Besides works of so distinctly a religious nature, Pro-fessor Goltz has found recognition as a painter of theater drops. In the Salzburg Mozart Theater, in Wiesbaden and in Agram are ex-

Professor Goltz has further achieved success with his portraits Tenuiel. Constable is represented by were his first favorites. So that we ourselves bring with us some contribution to the pleasure which we receive from the work of art before which we may be standing. This being so, it is not surprising that a flower-lover whether he be a botanist, or a simple amateur, should feel both inspiration and pleasure in looking at pictures by artists who faithfully depict plants trees and flowers. 4 4 4

Visiting a picture gallery, such a one will probably note the little rock plants in a scene by Leonardo da Vinci, or the primula growing in the corner of a Piero di Cosimo, or the strewn blossoms on the marble steps of a Crivelli; where another would remembering Holbein's predilection pass the same picture twenty times for carnations, not our modern without having observed that they contained such treasures.

Sniff never caught a rabbit was enough to make blackberry pud-dings and jam and tarts and jelly which they enjoyed as much as here and stewed blackberry-and-apple and did and he would always have been fresh blackberries for Father and chasing one if there had always been Mother and Grandpa and Grandma one to chase, but since there wasn't and Uncle and Aunty—and Millymaster's heels, stopping frequently And all the time a little rabbit on three legs with one ear pointed skipped about in the woods and and the other hanging limply down

Today the sun was shining, oh, ever so brightly, causing the dewdrops on the new green grass blades to sparkle with many colors; the songs of the first bluebirds filled the air and Billy Jake whistled as The milk is brought in cans of brass they went along, and Sniff chased

On and on they went and then, quite suddenly, Billy Jake stopped and Sniff stopped too. The little trees? Where could they be? Had he passed them? Well, there was just one thing to do about it and that was to turn back and look more carefully.

Billy Jake had gone but a step of wo on his backward journey when he stopped again, and again Sniff stopped, and then Billy Jake began o laugh and he laughed and he laughed and kept right on laughing oh, for ever so long. And then, all at once, he stopped laughing, and began feeling very sorry, for he just happened to think of how very long his dear Daddy would have to wait such teeny weeny ones—so little one could scarcely find them and with barely a leaf to show what they were! Dear, dear, why he, himself, could have done better than this! He saw at once what he must do. He with plenty of leaves upon them.

"You see, Sniff," he explained as he climbed upon the fence rail that he might reach some low branches of a small cottonwood tree, "we'll filling his mother's wood box, or he of a small cottonwood tree, "we'll plant some big ones right beside these teeny little ones and when our and he'll be glad too, 'cause then he won't have to wait so long. The next morning, so eager was he to see how much his trees had grown he could scarcely wait for breakfast to be over that he might be on his way. But at last he was off, with Sniff trotting close beside him. He ran as fast as ever he could until he reached the place where he had planted them, and then he stopped, and he stared and he stared. His trees! His beautiful trees! What in the world could be the matter with them! Why, they were all bent over, and the leaves, the lovely green leaves he had worked so hard to get, were all dried and crimpled up. Oh dear! Oh dear!

Up on the fence rail he climbed, and sat gazing sorrowfully at his poor little plantings. He could see poor little plantings. He could see that his Daddy's trees, though they had not grown any taller, were yet as straight and green as they had been the day before, and the few been the many taller, and the few know those little trees I told ground? Did You Ever Fall In Love With Words?

Words have amazing powers. The world offers vast opportunities to the skillful users of them. There are words for every occasion—words that thunder commands; words bristling with compelling force; words of zephyr-like delicacy; words which convey in spired thought; words of romance; words to express every shade of meaning.

Through a justly famous easy method of spare time study at home you may make words the expressions of your moods, the tools of your necessities. You can learn how to weave them into stories that sell; advertisements that convince; letters that win.

OUTLOOK FOR FOOTWEAR IS SATISFACTORY Sale Good Buying for Easter but Caution Prevails-Leather Market Is Quiet According to reports received from the more prominent shoe manufacturers, conditions at the factories are quite satisfactory. Current activity results from the general desire of buyers to avoid a shortage of spring goods, particularly such as are related to the Easter seasuch as are related to the Easter season. It is obvious that caution is again dominating but it seems a fair assumption that business imbued with a certain amount of moderation will redound to the good of the industry as a whole. From a shoe manufacturer's viewpoint, the prospects of an active spring and summer demand is practically assured, and although new bookings may be lacking in quantity, their frequency will maintain a steady and normal output. Footwear prices remain unchanged, notwithstanding the fact that the popular colors demanded by makers of ladies' low cuts are scarce, and very strong in quotations. Men's and boy's dress and street shoes are offered at figures which permits of no concessions, unless constructed in a way that is commensurate with a lower range of terms. Shoes for rough service are selling at rates never before equalled, when improvements over the old are considered. Stitchdowns are still preferred over the ancient turned, sewed process, particularly in the children's and misses' run of sizes. The call for ladies' novelty shoes shows no signs of abating. novelty shoes shows no signs of abating. The demand for oak sole leather continues moderate, new business during the current month not being up to expectations. Tanners are firmly holding to established rates. UNITED STATES AN EASY VICTOR

Defeat Canada for Lapham Trophy at Squash Racquets, 13 to 2

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Feb. 8—The annual international competition between teams of squash racquets players from the United States and Canada, for the Lapham trophy, held here on Saturday, resulted in an easy victory for the United States, the score being 13 matches to 2. Nine matches of the 15 were played at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club, and the other six at the University Club. Canada won one at each place.

six at the University Club. Canada won one at each place.

W. Palmer Dixon, United States and metropolitan champion, was the leader of the winning team, and had a real struggle to defeat J. H. Chipman of the University Club of Toronto, on the Racquet Club courts, 15—12, 11—15, 15—8, 15—11. Chipman played first-clash squash, and only by the skillful tactics of Dixon, who has dominated the United States play ever since he first made his appearance on since he first made his appearance on the Harvard University team, was the result placed to the credit of the united States.

Another player of good promise appeared in the person of young Eric Hedstrom of Buffalo, who defeated C. Graham of Otawa, by the top-heavy score of 15—5, 15—5, 15—2. It was a promising debut for the young player, who is also prominent in tennis play. The only winners for Canada were K. Lash, another University Club of Toronto player, who defeated F. B. Read of Providence, after a long fivegame match, 12—15, 15—6, 15—12, 17—18, 15—12, and H. V. P. Lewis of the Toronto Racquet Club, who eliminated A. E. Ells of New York, 12—15, 18—17, 15—12, 15—7. The summary:

W. P. Dixon, United States, defeated

 R. W. Gilmore, United States, defeated
 R. Elliott, Canada. 15—6, 17—15, 15—1.
 H. V P. Lewis, Canada, defeated A. E.

HOFF RAISES THE POLE VAULT RECORD

Makes Star Performance in Boston A. A. Meet

Charles Hoff of Norway is today the holder of a new world's indoor pole vault record of 13ft. 1½in., as the result of his winning that event in the thirty-seventh annual indoor games of the Boston Athletic Association at the Boston Arena Saturday. It was the second time during the week that Hoff had established a new mark for this event as he broke the former record in the Millrose A. A. games at Madison-Square Garden, New York, Thursday, when he valuted 13ft. in. That he is capable of raising the new mark several inches was clearly evident. Saturday when he cleared the bar by over six inches, but did not try again, being satisfied with winning the event and making the new mark. This was the feature of the meet,

Class B Tourney Gets Under Way

Several of the Leading Players in Close Matches at Crescent A. C.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—The remaining 11 matches in the first round of the United States Class B squash tencrescent Athletic Club, for which 60 players are competing, will be played this afternoon, 17 having been disposed of over the week-end.

While no surprises were recorded in the matches played, several of the leading players had close matches before they managed to emerge victors on Saturday. This was especially true of E. R. Brumley, the Harvard Club leader, who had a hard three-game battle before he won from W. B. Schleiter of the Yale Club, the score being 15—10, 16—18, 15—13. It was only the steadiness of the veteran that finally saved him from defeat. Other close matches resulted in victories by Barnwell Elliott of the New York Athletic Club over C. J. CANADIAN GOLFERS PLAN FOR GREATER CO-OPERATION by the four semifinalists in each pro-vincial championship.

As the rules of golf forbid a player entering in an individual competition to have his expenses paid, the pro-posal was made, with the Walker Cup posal was made, with the Walker Cup matches as a precedent, that an inter-provincial team match, four players to a team, be staged a day or two previous to the Canadian amateur championship and the members of the team would not endanger their amateur standing by having their ex-penses paid to the venue of the cham-niouship.

The membership of the association is now 148 clubs, an increase of 17 during the past year. The greens section, which was organized a year ago, has proven a great success. The amateur championship will be held at the Toronto Golf Club, probably starting on June 28, and the open at the Royal Montreal Club about the middle of Montreal Club about the middle of August.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 8 (Special)—
A special committee was appointed at the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Royal Canadian Golf Association here Saturday to prepare the necessary changes in the constitution which will be presented at the next annual meeting, by means of which there will be greater co-operation between the clubs and associations in eastern Canada, and those in the West. Owing to geographical conditions there has been little benefit to the western clubs in membership in the R. C. G. A., which has been largely an eastern Canada organization and national in name only. The western clubs are in accord with the proposal.

The melection of officers resulted as follows: C. A. Bogert, Toronto, president; B. L. Anderson, Toronto, secretary-treasurer; F. M. Chaldecott, Vancouver; A. L. Smith, Calgary; R. PENNSYLVANIA WINS FROM CORNELL FIVE

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 8 (Special)-The University of Pennsylvania's vic-tory against Cornell University here Saturday, 27 to 16, placed the winners in undisputed possession of third place in the Intercollegiate Basketvania were in a tie for the position. Welsh Rugby Team The two teams played evenly in the early part of the game, the score being 9 to 9 at one time, but at the end of the first half the score stood 16 to 9 in favor of Pennsylvania.
From then on there was little doubt as to the outcome. The star of the contest was W. J. Ramage '26 of Pennsylvania, who went in about the middle of the first half and finished with a total of 11 points. His brilliant playing was really responsible for the Pennsylvania victory. The score:

Peace, International Competition, and Co-operation Were the Keynotes of the Annual Gathering-Mersereau Re-elected

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Feb. 8-Peace and inernational competition and co-operaon were the keynotes of the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, held at the Wal-dorf Astoria Saturday. Only one minor nomination required the counting of a ballot, and the usual discusing of a banot, and the usual discussions over ranking, schedules or the perennial amateur rule situation were totally absent. Even Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, who dropped in during the afternoon, alluded to the unusual peace which brooded over the Most of the time of the meeting was devoted to the consideration of various matters to bring greater harmony between the regulations of the national association and the International Federation. Problems of ball reformation, the increase of the minimum bound to 55 inches, and the requirement of a smooth surface, were adopted without discussion, except by the chairman of discussion, except by the chairman of the committee, Walter L. Pate, president of the New York Sectional Association. Arrangements were made for the attendance of the United States at the annual meeting of the Federation, and for the calling of a special meeting of all Davis Cup nations at London late in June, and the participation of the U. S. L. T. A. in this also.

The sending of three teams for international play during the coming ternational play during the coming year was unanimously approved. A team of four women will go to Eng-land for the Wimbledon jubilee, and for the Wightman Cup match, with a great possibility that they will also compete in the French championships and other events, an invitation to that effect from the French Federation having been read at the meeting. Two men will also be sent to England and France for the same events, and another effort to secure several players to go to Australia next winter for their championships will be undertaken, such a trip, by from two to tour players, having been adopted for the second year in succession.

The adoption of the schedule of championships went through without hitch, not the slightest opposition being shown. For the most part it is ex-actly the same as last year. The leading changes take the United States Club of Boston has taken over first place, with Harvard University a point behind in second.

Harvard Club captured five points from Neighborhood Club of Quincy which enabled it to lead the race, toinception, to Baltimore, to the Interpark Tennis Association. The dates adopted were as follows: 1926

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 8 (Special)— Queen's University scored their first victory in the senior intercollegiate basketball series Saturday when they swamped McGill University, 28 to 10, and the locals are now tied for second place with University of Western Ontario, each team having won one and lost one game. The winners were too ners in undisputed possession of third place in the Intercollegiate Basket-ball League with three victories and two defeats. Cornell and Pennsylvania were in a tie for the position. materially and the losers were forced to shoot from well out, and they had practically no success.

The showing of the visitors was somewhat of a disappointment as a very close game was expected, they having defeated University of Toronto by two points, while the locals lost to Toronto by one point here. The Tri-Color secured a lead early and at half time were leading by 16 to 4. The winners had a smooth working combination which enabled Sutton, Clarke and Haslam to work in close under the McGill basket, but at that they missed a number of apparently

Several other dates, including the national girls' turf championships and the public courts, the old municipal championships, will be settled later by the schedule committee.

A few changes in the regulations of international play for women for the Wightman Cup, and for junior and / boys' championships, were adopted with slight discussion. The and boys' championships, adopted with slight discussion. former were largely to clarify the rules, and were largely changes of wording. In the junior rules, however, the time for entries was fixed at 10 days prior to the start, instead of five, and it was provided that a boy could enter only one event if both junior and boy events were included in the same tourney. This will prevent such incidents as the participation of W. F. Coen Jr. in both the junior and boy singles in the recent indoor championships. It was also provided that the regulation for a rest after the sec-ond set apply to boys as well as women and girls, but that both of these regulations were only for national championships.

All the officers and the executive committee nominations by the nominating committee were elected, but in selecting the nominating committee for 1927, Charles S. Landers of New York was nominated independently, and elected over W. D. R. Evans of Philadelphia. G. P. Gardner

"AUTO" TYPE OF TRANSFORMER INNEWSET

This Method of Coupling Has Proven Efficient in Receiver

This is the second of a series of three articles on the new Radio Broadcast "Universal" Receiver, the first article having appeared Feb. ? This particular article deals with the parts used and discusses substitution at the end.

The Universal first of all is sensitive, yet not to the point where quality of reproduction is impaired. While it is not sufficiently selective to do the impossible, it is well suited to average receiving conditions.

From a study of the schematic diagram it will be seen that there are two coil assemblies, one a primary and secondary in the antenna cir-cuit (L1 and L2, the latter tuned by a variable condenser of .0005 mf capacity), the other a tuned radiofrequency transformer of the autotransformer type and a tickler coil, the latter being fixed in position but adjusted electrically by means of the 500 to 50,000-ohm resistance in series with it. These coils are indicated in the diagram by L3 and L4. Two General Radio type 277D coils are perfectly adapted to use as the proper coil assemblies for L1 and L2, L3 and L4.

On these coils there are small and large windings. The small ones are used for L1 and L4, while the large ones are used for L2 and L3. The taps indicated on L2 and L3 are easily provided by picking up the proper turn with the small blade a jack-knife and scraping clean so that the proper wires may be soldered to the taps to carry out the correct circuit arrangement. In L3 the tap is made 35 turns from the grid end or single-wound end of the coil. These coils have been designed to use with the General Radio type 247H condensers, and will go well below the lowest and well above a remarkably efficient one embodythe air.

By the Associated Press Providence, R. I., Feb. 8

THAT all "fading" is not caused L by atmospheric conditions was discovered last night when William Kenney of this city, while listening to a Philadelphia radiocasting station on his radio, heard scratchy noises with intermittent fading of signals, this time different from common disturbances. A radio man was called and upon examination of the set it was found that a mouse, very much alive, had made his temporary hiding place underneath the detector tube socket. When the rodent came in contact with the "grid" wire the signals were short circuited.

To France must go the credit of proposing the organization of the International Institute

Beginning to Think Internationally

of Intellectual Co-operation, and it is fitting that the body which is designed to develop cultural contacts should be housed in Paris. Its program has already been set out in these columns, and the institute actually began its operations in November last. But it has just been officially inaugurated by the President of the Republic, Gaston Doumergue. There were present at the ceremonies in the French capital representatives of the savants, of the writers, and of the artists of the whole

Of its utility there can be no question. The desirability of bringing together the élite of all nations and of helping them to collaborate is acknowledged even by those who at first ranged themselves among the adversaries of the institute. M. Bergson, the famous philosopher, presided over a commission at Geneva out of which developed, under the auspices of the League of Nations, the present organization. François Albert, who in 1924 was the Minister of Beaux Arts in France, suggested that a permanent executive organ should be established, and M. Herriot offered to provide a building at Paris. The building, which is a wing of the Palais Royal, was eventually found by M. de Monzie, and to his successor, M. Daladier, fell the honor of handing over the spacious rooms to Julien Luchaire, the French educationalist who was appointed as director.

It has been properly pointed out that the institute must not be regarded as a superuniversity endeavoring to impose any kind of intellectual dictatorship. Neither French nor German nor British nor American culture is to aim at supremacy. It is sought, by practical means, with a view to better understandings, to strengthen the relations between the savants, the writers, and the artists of the various

Here is a sort of clearing-house of ideas, and here is a meeting place in which the élite can form and renew and cultivate friendly associations. It is obvious that, if the intellectual sections of the different communities are in constant touch, the masses must be influenced and be taught to think internationally. Anything that serves to break down the water-tight compartments in which the nations have imprisoned themselves is to be encouraged. There should be no frontiers for thought.

Today physical science, art, and thought are not elaborated in the dust of laboratories, studios, or libraries: it is necessary to have a larger vision and to come into contact with the realities of the wider world. But until recent times the efforts made to organize the relations between intellectuals-relations which would be favorable to their work, to their rights, and. to general progress—have been somewhat sporadic. Men have worked too much in isolation; were far too scattered. With the growing sense of interdependence, it is not surprising that there should be felt a need for organization and co-operation. Certainly the institute, if it is rightly conducted, should have an immense influence for good.

But it is essential that those who are interested in this work should have for example a clear conception of the possibilities of physical science. M. Painlevé, who besides being a politician is a distinguished savant, properly said that in themselves physical science, thought, art, literature, are neither moral nor immoral. The same explosive, he remarked, can open a tunnel, create prosperity, or be purely destructive. To what end are discoveries, inventions, philosophies, literature, to be employed? Happily the promoters of the institute are aware of their responsibilities and are animated only by the highest motives.

Nor, on the other hand, can the peoples consent to abandon their freedom: each people must develop naturally on its own lines: the world cannot be governed with the rigorous logic that would be applied to the demonstration of a theory or the pursuit of an experiment. Life cannot be regulated with geometrical precision. It is impossible for the institute to evolve mathematical rules even in the interests of peace. But there is every indication that the members of the institute have the most admirable appreciation of their mission, which is to stimulate, to suggest, to co-ordinate efforts which have hitherto been dispersed. Regarded from any point of view, the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation should prove to be one of the most beneficial creations of the post-war years.

Less than a generation ago in the United States, North as well as South, in the larger cities and in the smaller towns and villages, wherever a barber's red and white striped sign was displayed, the proprietor and journeymen who there offered service to the public were, in a great majority of cases, Negroes. Gradually, and for some reason which has seldom been discussed and probably never explained, shops operated by Negroes have disappeared. In few cities and towns in the North today do men, or women, of the white race patronize even those that remain. Invaders from a foreign land have almost completely displaced the darker-hued "artists" who virtually monopolized a profitable and altogether respectable industry.

A news dispatch sent out from Atlanta, Ga., a day or two ago, announced that an ordinance which awaits only the signature of the Mayor of that prosperous city prohibits Negro barbers from serving white patrons, and probably to emphasize the existence of absolute racial equality, the rendering of similar service by white barbers to Negroes. It is explained that the ordinance is not to be effective until June 1, prior to which time, no doubt, it is presumed that the many shops so manned by Negroes in Atlanta will suspend operations or confine their patronage to those whose color defines their eligibility, even if it does not limit their de-

The Negro barber of an earlier period was an institution, distinctly American. Among these courteous and adept proprietors of shops were many who had established themselves, apparently, as fixtures in their chosen communities. Some were property owners and taxpayers, and men who took an active interest in political and civic affairs. But as one recalls them at this somewhat remote period, the impression is that most of them were those whose hairs had even then begun to show the marks of northern frosts. They were, perhaps, the remnant of that period when Negro boys were taught to serve their masters in southern homes. It may have been from these homes that the barber of a half century ago was graduated after the war, to make his way among strange peoples and in unfamiliar places.

If this supposition explains the adeptness, the courteous bearing, and the dependability of the older generation of colored barbers, it may not at all be wondered at that they did not train their own boys and other youths of their, race to follow their own trade. Such skill and proficiency do not pass by inheritance. Youth frequently seems to despise the occupations of its elders. There is always the search, insistent or casual, for something new. Often this is for the way of least resistance.

The turning point in this occupational highway has too long been passed to make probable any return to it. Except on the part of only a few who may be adversely affected by the change, perhaps the revolutionary movement will not be regretted. But the finality of the metamorphosis is indicated by the apparent determination to emphasize it by dignifying it with the use of the impressive words, "Be it

Although the Bishop of London definitely stated that the largely attended meeting in the British Sentiment on Liquor Smuggling

Church House under the shadow of Westminster Abbey, over which he presided a few days ago, was not called to express any views about prohibition, the remarks which he made there about liquor smuggling from Britain to the United States provided unquestionable evidence that he feels keenly on this latter issue. For example, he is quoted as having designated the attempt "to undo anything that a great sister nation has chosen to decide for its own good" as "gross impertinence." And the fact that cries of "shame!" were raised when he cited official American statistics showing that in the last six months of 1925 twenty out of twenty-four liquor ships seized by the American authorities were British, indicated clearly that his hearers were of one mind with him.

The bishop showed himself willing fearlessly to present facts as he believed them to be, for he stated that there was not the slightest doubt that the industrial output of America had increased and its public health had improved. Moreover, he effectively combated the fallacy about drinking in public places, etc., by these

You cannot think anything of those silly little fools who swagger at dances with brandy flasks. That's mere bravado. You have to look at the great, broad effect upon

And he further acknowledged that the traffic is most dishonoring to Great Britain, adding: "We have in our minds the wonderful rescue made by the President Roosevelt; let us make some adequate return.'

The meeting referred to, by the way, was held in answer to an appeal sent to Great Britain by the American Citizens' Committee of One Thousand, and it would seem that the committee must feel that the effort it thus put forward has been amply repaid in view of the answer to its appeal which was approved there. This answer stated that the fact that any British citizen should have taken any part whatever in invading the sanctity of the laws of the United States for financial gain has aroused widespread indignation in Great Britain. And it also included the assurance that "we share with you the feeling that nothing should be left undone to reduce still further the evils to which you call attention."

That it is only a matter of time, and relatively a short time, before this evil of liquor trafficking is completely wiped out, would seem an obvious conclusion from such a promise. When, moreover, the sentiments expressed in the letter from Sir Austen Chamberlain, the British Foreign Minister, to the organizers of the meeting is taken into consideration, in which he declared that "His Majesty's Government have done, by means of the liquor traffic convention, and are doing, by all means in their power, all that is possible to assist the United States Government in suppressing this traffic, of which His Majesty's Government entirely disapprove," it is reasonable to conclude that the force behind the prohibition reform the world over is growing at such a pace that its final complete victory is practically a foregone conclusion.

When a Paris audience refused to allow an American performer at a music hall to jazz the National

Good Form

"Marseillaise," their action should have taught a lesson, although that is doubtful, to those who are willing to vulgarize anything and everything if only it will please the crowd or profit themselves. In this case, it by no means pleased the crowd, whose sense of dignity where national institutions are concerned was outraged. The "Marseillaise" no doubt has been abused many a time, if only by unnecessary reiteration, but in the eyes of Frenchmen and much of the world besides it represents a people's conquest of its rights and a new order in the Western world. The action of the Paris audience and the order of the police prefect that no liberties were to be taken with the national chant, should remind those in other parts of the world who are likely to forget, that the dignity of a nation's ideals is a solemn and sacred thing, not to be cheapened for any purpose. It is sometimes intimated that a deference to good form, to what is becoming and proper, is inconsistent with demogratic ideals and their practice. Nothing could be further from the fact, nothing could be more fatuous or more lacking in the understanding that men in their hearts respect the real dignity which is a sign of man's high estate. There is no need of priggishness or snobbery, but there is a great need of the recognition that certain features and attributes of a nation's existence are never to be trifled

Another phase of the matter was exhibited when the British forces marched to the Cologne railway station homeward bound, the band playing "Yankee Doodle." There was no prejudice against this air, the British forces did not conceive that its employment would lessen Britain's prestige or self-respect, they saw a good marching tune and used it, in this case with quite as much benefit to the national dignity as in the French protest at jazzing the "Marseillaise." In both cases, there was an intuition of the fitness of things, which after all is the meaning of the words "good form."

In parts of New England a few nights ago, as well as in many other sections along the northern Atlantic and eastern lake coasts, a snowstorm, driven on the fleet wings of a northeast wind, blockaded streets, highways and in some cases railroads. The whole transportation scheme on land and sea was, for the time being, completely upset. Men and women, marooned by the elements, sought shelter wherever they could find it, thousands counting themselves fortunate to escape from wind and sleet and drifting snows.

Voices That Outride the Storm

But in those broader upper avenues which the storm crossed and recrossed, and where there was no shelter from the searching "northeaster," traffic was moving as usual. From far off Rio de Janeiro came a message announcing the arrival there of the intrepid Spanish airmen. From radio stations far and near came, to those who listened, the almost perfect rendition of the spoken word, harmonies blared forth by bands and orchestras, and the elusive cadences of stringed instruments. In Greater Boston, during the day, telephone exchanges transmitted more than a million more messages than customarily are handled in twenty-four hours.

How strikingly utilitarian proved this newest plaything of the millions, the radio, in the emergency. With the suspension of all suburban transportation lines on the evening of that day, possibly 100,000 persons sought accommodations in the city's hotels. When it became apparent that they had all been cared for, there was sent out from a central radió station a reassuring message to those in the homes who had been anxiously hoping for a word from absent ones. It was a welcome and almost a personal "all's well" to waiting wives, mothers and

In its almost unlimited reach the radio has done more than supplement both the telegraph and the telephone. It is immune to "wire" trouble, and to most of those purely physical handicaps to which cables and loops sometimes succumb. But the telegraph, the telephone and the radio combined bring the world to one's very door. Their vibrant voices outride the storm, cross the seas and penetrate the prairies and mountains. Mankind, though isolated and shut off from the world, is not alone in the sense that he once was lonesome. He may be entertained. amused, and even taught if he will but heed and listen. In the remotest sanctuary of the hills he may be assured that his neighbors, whom he now counts among the peoples in the remotest corners of the earth, are at peace. The voices of the night, penetrating even storm-swept leagues, speak in reassuring benediction the easily interpreted message of good will which all the world gladly hears.

Editorial Notes

In a periodical published by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, entitled Industry the leading article in a recent issue consisted of excerpts from an address delivered before the Boston Chapter, Society of Industrial Engineers. It was entitled "Can New England Meet Increasing Competition?" and discussed various phases of its problem under a variety of subheads. One of these was "The Real Cause of Waste," and the matter under it read in part: "What delays or takes time or runs up what we call 'cost' or waste, is the lack or absence of the right types of thinking, and nothing else-for in the last analysis, all effects of whatever nature can be traced back to the mental processes of human beings." It continued:

Waste, therefore, of whatever variety, is caused by wrong types of thinking—by types which can be classified as follows Confused thinking Untrained thinking

Unnecessary thinking Pessimistic thinking Growch thinking Dishonest thinking Careless thinking

Unhealthy thinking Misdirected thinking Misguided thinking Destructive thinking Thoughtless thinking Illogical thinking

One is not surprised, therefore, to find the conclusion drawn that obviously the first approach to this great problem of waste elimination is to develop ways and means for concentrating attention on eliminating this wrong thinking on the part of those engaged in manufacturing enterprises, whether employers or employees.

It was a stirring tribute which was accorded to Hubert Houben, the German sprint champion, in his initial American appearance in Boston, Mass. Houben fought for the fatherland in the World War, but the enmity of war days was forgotten when the throng that filled Mechanics Building nearly to capacity stood at attention to the strains of "The Watch on the Rhine" to do him honor. It has been many a long day since a Boston gathering of this size has paid its respects to the German national anthem. Housen was enthusiastically cheered. There was no mistaking the sincerity of the welcome he received. It must have been a touching experience to the kindly faced German champion.

The Diary of a Political Pilgrim

FROM A LONDON CORRESPONDENT

Just before Christmas last a little shilling book appeared from the pen of Lord Beaverbrook, entitled "Politicians and the Press." It was an ambitious title, and the volume was even more ambitiously advertised. But in fact the name was a clever camouflage for an amiable and somewhat naïve "boost" of Lord Beaverbrook himself and

Lord Beaverbrook has had a remarkable career. Born in Nova Scotia, in the Maritime Provinces of Canada, in a Presbyterian manse, Max Aitken, as he was known until he was "ennobled" in 1916, early demonstrated his exceptional abilities by bringing about a merger of the larger cement companies of Canada, with great profit to himself of the Daily Express, which he owns.

He then moved to England, where, through the influence of his lifelong friend, Mr. Bonar Law, already a leader of the Conservative Party, he entered the House of Commons after a whirlwind campaign at Ashton-under-Lyme, where for the first time the now familiar electioneering methods of the North American Continent were exhibited to the astonished gaze of the more slow-moving

But the new member, despite his successes in other fields, proved to have little talent for parliamentary debate, and his influence was confined to that which he could wield through his intimacy with Mr. Bonar Law, who became the leader of the Conservative Party in 1911.

In 1916 he took a hand in helping to bring about that reconstruction of the wartime government which brought Mr. Lloyd George to power with Mr. Bonar Law as his chief lieutenant. Immediately afterward he left the House of Commons to enter the House of Lords as Lord Beaverbrook, and in 1917 he took charge of the Ministry of

Since the war, however, Lord Beaverbrook's political interests have centered almost entirely in the Daily Express, which he acquired some years ago and has made much more lively than before, and the Sunday Express, which he started himself. He has the ambition to build up the most powerful popular press in Great Britain, and through it to exercise an influence on politics far greater than he could possibly command, either as a member of the House of Commons or of the House of Lords.

Hence "Politicians and the Press." The book is amusing as a piece of propaganda. It attempts to inflate the reputation both of Lord Beaverbrook and of the Daily Express by the ancient device of discreetly enlarging upon all that either has said or done, while equally discreetly omitting to mention or diminishing or belittling the importance both of what others have said and done and of facts themselves.

None the less, the title of Lord Beaverbrook's book raises a question of great interest and importance in the modern world. How far is the press supplanting Parliament as the directing power in national affairs? Is the great newspaper proprietor, through his supposed ability to influence millions of votes, becoming the feudal baron of the so-called democratic age?

There was a time when the great newspaper owners thought that they could supplant the politicians as the dominant power in the state, and dictate to the legislature what it should do by their power to mobilize public opinion behind their own ideas. The most definite attempt to do thus was made, so far as Great Britain was concerned, during the war.

The war was the newspaper's real opportunity. Parliament was practically in suspense. Many members were at the front. The Government was a veiled dictatorship.
The only opposition—the only effective public critics were the newspapers, despite the censorship. For a time they wielded immense power, and Lord Northcliffe, the leading newspaper proprietor and controller of the huge Harmsworth Press, openly began to claim to be the power behind the throne and to act accordingly After the war the crisis came. Lord Northcliffe demanded of Mr. Lloyd George a dominant position at the Peace Conference. It was refused and open war was declared, a war all the more serious for Mr. Lloyd George because he in turn, having no party behind him, was largely dependent upon newspaper support. The outcome, however, was the complete triumph of the parliamentary power. First Lord Northcliffe was defeated by Mr. Lloyd George. Then Mr. Lloyd George was defeated by the Conservative Party, and Great Britain returned to political "normalcy" again.

Mr. Gladstone used to say that if he had to choose between the platform and the press in fighting an election, he would choose the platform every time. The experience of the last ten years proves that Mr. Gladstone was right, even in an age when the press is vastly more important and ubiquitous than it was in his day. A book by Lord Northcliffe's right-hand man, Mr. Kennedy Jones, entitled 'Fleet Street and Downing Street," and published a few years ago, admitted the failure of the press offensive and the predominance of the political machinery in political

The truth about the whole matter would seem to be that the functions of politicians and the press are quite distinct, and that the position of both is becoming increasingly subordinate to that third power called public opinion.

The function of the politician is to discuss political problems with the electorate and to secure a mandate by majority vote to carry on the political administration of the country along certain well-defined lines. The function of the press is primarily publicity, to carry to the individual the news of what is going on, together with such comment and criticism as will be interesting and valuable to him. In both cases it is the function of public opinion

In earlier days both politicians and the press were in much more powerful position than they are today. Public opinion was ill-informed. It was inclined to accept the statements of those in authority about both politics and news. It had not enough experience to judge for itself between the truth and error.

Public opinion today is much more sophisticated. It is inclined to take everything with a grain of salt, to judge what it hears or is told for itself, and to accept nothing as true simply because it is in print.

Just in proportion as public opinion is independent, is capable of judging for itself, and is ready to reject clever appeals to its own self-interest and prejudice, it will itself be found governing the land. For lies and propaganda, in which both politicians and the press deal from time to time, can only influence where they can play upon ignorance and indifference. They disappear in face of a knowledge of the truth. In a world, therefore, in which the democracy is becoming increasingly well educated, both politicians and the press are increasingly becoming the servants and not the masters of public opinion. And that is as it should be. After all, under a system of popular government the ultimate authority must be the people themselves. The press ought to give the information and the comment by means of which the people can instruct and control those whom it charges with the duty of managing its affairs. In a true democracy the influence of both press and politician must inevitably be proportionate to the honesty and wisdom with which they perform their separate functions

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Moscow.

Douglas Fairbanks, who carried Moscow by storm last spring with his performance in "The Thief of Bagdad," has won new laurels here with his interpretation of another picturesque bandit, "Robin Hood." Two other films compete with "Robin Hood" in popularity. They are the well-known German production, "Nibelungen," and a Russian photo-drama, entitled "Jewish Fate." The latter gives a half amusing, half pathetic representation of the unproductive shifts to which the poor Jews in the crowded towns of southern Russia before the revolution were obliged to resort in order to make a living. It is designed to stimulate the movement for settling the Jews in land colonies, and it is planned to exhibit the film in America as a means of raising money for this purpose.-

- + + + A. A. Heller of New York City, representing the International Oxygen Company of Newark, N. J., has concluded a contract with the Soviet Metal Syndicate which has met with the approval of the Concessions Committee. The contract provides for the creation of a joint stock company, capitalized at 1,000,000 rubles, half of this sum to be supplied by the company and half by the metal syndicate. The company undertakes within a period of three years to erect nine plants in various-Russian industrial centers for the manufacture of oxygen, hydrogen, acetyline and other gas products. One of the main purposes of the agreement, from the standpoint of the Soviet Government, is to spread the use of the acetyline welding method throughout Russia. The company has the right to import machinery free of duty and to employ 10 per cent foreign labor. It is permitted to amortize its capital at a rate of 10 per cent a year, thereby retiring its investment at the end of a ten-year period. The stock company pays the usual taxes levied on state industrial enterprises, with an additional contribution of 3 per cent of the total gross receipts. The contract expires at the end of fifteen years, when all the property of the enterprise reverts to the Government.

4 4 4 The historical drama holds the center of the Moscow stage at the present time. Basil Zolotareff's opera, "The Decabristi," was given in the State Opera House on the anniversary of the uprising of the Decabristi against Tsar Nicholas I. While it can scarcely be ranked as one of the world's great operas, the performance was quite passable from a musical standpoint, and the scene in which the Tsar tricks one of the captured leaders of the Decabristi into telling him all the secrets of the conspiracy by informing him that he, the Tsar, is himself an ardent champion of the cause of liberty, has a considerable measure of dramatic interest. A modern writer named Aleksei Tolstoy achieved striking success with a play entitled "The Plot of an Empress," which depicts the intrigues of the late Tsarina and brings in the assassination of the monk, Rasputin. The same author has now prepared for production a play entitled "Azev," based on the life story of this greatest provocateur of the Russian revolutionary

The Communist Party has now followed the example of many other organizations and institutions by changing its name from Russian to All-Union. The change provoked a certain amount of debate in the party congress which decided on it. Some speakers argued that the name "Russian Communist Party" was so closely associated with the struggles of the revolution that it should not be abandoned. Others proposed to abolish simultaneously the names of the Ukrainian, Transcaucasian and other national Communist parties. However, the congress decided that it was necessary to rename the party in order to conform with the new structure of the Soviet state, and refused to change the names of the national Communist parties on the ground that this might injure the local susceptibilities of the countries involved.

4 + + Russia's imports from America during the last year reached the figure of 161,771,000 rubles, while the exports amounted to 28,145,000 rubles. The large purchases of American cotton by the All-Union Textile Syndicate account for this marked preponderance of imports over

"Another View of the Forestry Situation" To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Fully realizing the importance of such issues as the World Court, federal taxation, etc., it is to be hoped that readers of the Monitor do not view-America's forest problem from the same standpoint that a recent contributor to this column views it, as shown in the letter published under the caption, "Another View of the Forestry Situation.

Those who see in the forests only so much standing umber with which to build houses, are advised that there are a dozen ways in which the forests are a factor in the well-being and prosperity of every community of the United States. They are advised that a few cents will bring information as to why the Federal Government should be in the forest business. The Government Printing Office has on hand many publications on the subject.

That the presence of forests makes it possible to raise arge quantities of fruit in certain sections of the country, is an established fact. Forest areas are not only sources of local showers, but are responsible for local breezes to a certain extent, through atmospheric action due to the different temperatures that exist in and around them. Consideration should also be given to the relationship of forests and wild life.

One of the most important uses of the forest is the protection it gives to the headwaters of streams that serve irrigation purposes. The water from rain and thaw that is stored in the forest floor is the supply of most springs that feed the streams. The growth of roots protects the ground against washouts. Streams that are not protected around their headwaters in this way soon go dry and are unfit for irrigation. During heavy rains the water runs from the slopes in such torrents that it cuts through the surface of the ground, forming large gullies, carrying with it sand, rocks, and anything that comes in its way, reaching the valleys below in the form of a flood, which is destructive in the extreme, and has cost the inhabitants of many such localities, lives, property and live stock.

The same condition appears where forests have been burned over and where the floor of the forests have been closely grazed and tramped down by stock.

There will never be a substitute for the forest. America was the last civilized nation to realize this fact, and Americans now see evidence that forestry is a part of "more sensible education." "World peace, crime control, temperance," etc., are major problems, but in the language of the Bible "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.' New York, N. Y.

"Anarchists and Can-Archists"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Edward A. Filene has thrown a white searchlight upon the unthinking American who unconsciously is backing up the anarchist, in his new word "can-archist." just such spotlights that will awaken public thought, and many will no longer linger in the ranks of the thoughtless. May not the parents of today let this same spotlight linger on their attitude toward the popular song, "Show Me the Way to Go Home," until it is no longer heard anywhere because law-abiding homes will neither play, sing nor listen to it?

Just such firm refusal to allow our children to be lawless in thought will strengthen our enforcement power.
